There, Their, or They're?There, Their, or They're?There, their, and they're: They're tricky to many people! This worksheet explains the difference. Then, kids choose the right word to complete each sentence.3rd gradeReading & Writing Index of contents Subject pronouns Object pronouns Worksheets - handouts Home Content Here is a useful subject pronouns worksheet to help students practice the subject pronouns: He, She, It, We, They. To start, students change nouns on the worksheet into the subject pronouns: He, She, It, We or They. Students then rewrite sentences, changing the subject nouns into subject pronouns. Finally, review the answers with the class by having each student read out a sentence. In this subject pronouns game, students watch their classmates do mimes and race to guess the subject pronoun and verb by making a basic present simple or present continuous sentence. In groups, students take it in turns to pick up a subject pronoun card and a verb card and mime them to the other group members. To mime the subject pronouns, students indicate with their hand the type of pronoun, e.g. circling their hand for 'we', etc. The others students watch the mime and race to guess the subject pronoun and verb by making a sentence in the present simple or present continuous, depending on which tense you want the students to practice, e.g. 'We jump' or 'We are jumping'. The first student to say the correct sentence wins and keeps the two cards. The student with the most cards at the end of the game wins. In this subject and object pronouns activity, students give opinions about people, places and things. Students think of people, places and things they love, like, don't mind, dislike or hate and write an answer under each heading on the worksheet. In pairs, students then take it in turns to ask their partner's opinion of the people, places and things under the headings using the question 'What do you think of...?' For example, 'What do you think of Will Smith?' Their partner replies by giving their opinion using subject and object pronouns, e.g. 'I like him. He's really good'. Encourage the students to give their own opinion in return and ask for explanations where possible. When everyone has finished, students give feedback to the class on their preferences. In this subject and object pronouns game, students play bingo by listening to gap-fill sentences and matching pronouns with the missing words. The caller reads a gap-fill sentence at random from the caller's sheet, saying the word 'blank' where the subject or object pronoun should go. The players listen to the sentence and check their bingo cards to see if a suitable subject or object pronoun from their card can be used in the sentence. If so, they cross the pronoun off their bingo card. The first player to cross off all nine pronouns on their card shouts 'bingo' and reads out the pronouns they crossed off. If the pronouns match with the sentences, the student wins the round and scores a point. The students play several rounds with a different student taking on the role of the bingo caller each time. The student with the most points at the end of the game is the winner. In this fun subject and object pronouns game, students match and replace underlined words in sentences with subject or object pronouns. In pairs, students take it in turns to turn over one sentence card and one pronoun card. If the pronoun matches with the underlined word or words in the sentence, the student reads the sentence aloud, replacing the word or words with the subject or object pronoun on the card. The student then keeps the two cards and has another turn. If the cards don't match, the student turns them back over. The student with the most pairs of cards at the end of the game wins. In this free subject and object pronouns worksheet, students complete and write sentences with subject and object pronouns. To begin, students complete sentences on the worksheet by changing words in brackets into subject or object pronouns. Next, students write sentences about five classmates using subject and object pronouns. They do this without writing the students' names in the sentences. Students then take it in turns to read their sentences to the class who listens and tries to guess who the sentences are about. In this amusing subject and object pronouns game, students play snap by matching Do you like...? questions with answers that contain subject and object pronouns. In pairs, both students turn over a card from their pile at the same time. If the question and answer match, the first student to say 'Snap' scores a point. Students then pick up their own cards, shuffle the pack and play again. Students do not pick up their partner's cards. If the question and answer don't match, students continue turning over cards until a matching pair comes up and someone says 'Snap'. If a student says 'Snap' when the answer doesn't match the question, the other student scores a point and the game continues. The first student to get ten points wins the game. This engaging subject vs. object pronouns worksheet can be used to help introduce or teach subject and object pronouns. Students begin by identifying subject and object pronouns in sentences. Afterwards, students rewrite sentences by replacing the underlined words in the sentences with subject or object pronouns. Next, students choose the subject or object pronoun in brackets that best completes each sentence and write it in the space provided. Students then write the word 'subject' or 'object' in the column on the left to indicate the type of pronoun used in the sentence. This leads on to freer practice where students write six sentences of their own using subject and object pronouns. In this free object pronouns game, students complete sentences with object pronouns. In pairs, students take it in turns to read each sentence to their partner using the word 'blank' for the missing object pronoun. Their partner listens and then repeats the sentence back, adding in a suitable object pronoun from the box on their worksheet. For each correct answer, students score one point. The student with the most points at the end of the game wins.
